

Pets

Many people enjoy having a pet.

If you live in a Homes Tasmania home, you need to ask us if you can keep a pet.

Whether or not you can have a pet will depend on:

- the type of pet you want to keep

- the type of home you live in.

When will Homes Tasmania say no to keeping pets?

We will always say yes if your animal is a guide dog.

We may say no to keeping pets if:

- your pet is dangerous – there is more information below

- there are rules at your home saying you can't keep pets – this might include blocks of units or flats

- the pet is aggressive, and it stops people from entering your property, for example, if your dog barks loudly at the person who checks the electricity meter

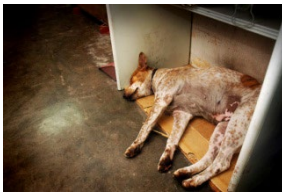

- your pet needs a kennel licence – this would depend on the rules in your local council area. Most councils say you need a kennel licence if you have more than 2 dogs

- you are breeding or racing the animals to make money – this is against the rules of your lease

- you have a pet that is not usually kept in a house or unit, such as a horse or a goat

- you have treated animals badly in the past

- the animals don't belong to you –sometimes we say it is OK to look after an animal for a short time – but you need to ask us about this.

There are rules if you are allowed to keep a pet

If you keep a pet in a Homes Tasmania home, you there are rules you need to follow.

- Register the pet with the local council. This means that you must tell the council about your pet and pay a fee. You need to do this every year.

- Make sure that your pet has a micro-chip. This helps the local council to find a pet if it goes missing.

- Make sure your pet is desexed. This helps reduce any stray animal population.

- Look after the pet well. This includes:

- feeding it

- keeping it healthy

- cleaning up after it.

Make sure that your pet is well behaved. It must not:

- disturb the neighbours

- be a nuisance

- be dangerous

- damage the home.

If you break any of these rules, we may ask you to stop keeping a pet at your home.

Sometimes, we can ask to have pets removed from your property.

In some cases, we may ask you to move out.

You cannot keep dangerous dogs

It's important for people to feel safe in our community.

Homes Tasmania does not allow people to keep dangerous dogs.

Sometimes, neighbours complain to us about pets. We ask them to contact the local council.

Local councils make sure people are obeying the rules of the Dog Control Act 2000.

We will also check to see if you have permission to keep the pet.

If you don't have permission, we may ask you to remove the animal.

We may also contact the local council.

Chris's story

Chris recently moved into a Homes Tasmania home. He is the owner of a big dog called Charlie.

Chris did not tell Homes Tasmania about Charlie.

There are lots of families living in Chris's neighbourhood. His next-door neighbour has three children. They are all scared of Charlie.

The neighbour called Homes Tasmania and complained about Charlie.

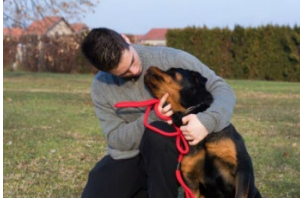

We asked the local council to find out whether Charlie was a dangerous dog.

We looked at Chris's paperwork. We found out that he has never asked us if it was OK to keep a dog at the home.

Unfortunately, the local council won't allow Charlie to live in that neighbourhood. He is a dangerous dog.

If Chris wants to stay in his Homes Tasmania home, he will need to move Charlie somewhere else.

What if you are waiting for a Homes Tasmania home?

When you apply for a home with us, you need to tell us if you have a pet.

If we offer you a home, we will consider the pets you have told us about when you applied for a home.

Having a pet means that you may need to wait longer for the right kind of home.

This does not apply if you need a guide dog.
